E. & O. E. CHAS. R BISHOP, Honolulu, Feb. 22d, 1872. Treasurer. The Poisoning Case.

Mr. EDITOR :- I learn that at the conclusion of the preliminary examination before His Honor the Chief Justice, in the case of the parties concerned in the rat poisoning affair at Kanai, which resulted so unfortunately in the death of a human being. the Court has ordered the committal of two of the parties, and discharged one. The story of the affair appears by the evidence to be that Mr. Wright mixed the poisonous substance, and entrusted the bag in which it was contained to Mr. Dole, to be by him in turn given to some one to take to the field. Mr. Dole had the bag in his possession a short time and gave it to Palakamaia, an employee under him. DEAR SIR :- At the time I wrote my last letter you, discoursing among other notable matters, The second was a half-mile race for a purse of of vagabonds, I had not read your own very pertinent remarks on the same branch of natural history. No apology for extra barshness was wholesome physic. Yet after all, this wide spread-We have been asked whether there is any law ing vagabondage is not the natural condition of in our statutes against betting on horse races? the native race, but rather one of the results of semi-civilization and a bad system of education. Something besides missionary labor has been wanting, and it has not been supplied. "Laborare est orare" was the motto of the Jesuits-"Work be "playing at cards, or any other game," whereby is worship," and that has not been taught. So we find that with the generations who have received the "blessings of education," industry has been eradicated. The old heathens were an industrious race. They worked from babyhood, and work became second nature with them. At this very day it is a rare thing to see an idle old kanaka or akine. Our pretentious Board of Education with all its complicated machinery and patronage has done nothing to boast of but is heavy in the sin of omission. Where are its results? Where are our native mechanics? Who does the Government work? What public work of any moment except
